Call to Worship:

Sometimes, in the month of February,
we are surprised by robins in the neighbourhood,
bright messengers of spring in the depths of winter.

We long for news of better days to come.

We long for the end of this bleak, cold season.

Like the robins, we must wait a while longer
for the earth to warm.

We must endure the hard frost and find food for our souls.

That is why we gather today:

to feast on the word of God

and rejoice in God's sheltering love.

Come, let us worship.

Opening Prayer:

God, who breaks through the borders that divide, moving out and into the world, mending and uniting the things that keep us
apart while keeping us distinct in the glory of creation, help us celebrate the infinite ways we are created in your image.

May we love you with all our soul

with all our being, with all our life,

in all-consuming love.

May we love our neighbour

with all our heart, with all our feeling,

with all our thought, and through all generations to come.

May we love you with all our might
with all our strength
with all that we possess, with the utmost of being.
May all our blessings serve to bless others in your holy name. May we love and be loved as you love us. Amen.
